TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and ALBACORE.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Bile Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Erection of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Flushing at the heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

A Husband in the Kitchen.

Once upon a time there was a man so surly and cross that he never thought his wife did any right in the house. So one evening in hay making time, he came home, swearing and scolding, and showing his teeth and making a dust.

"Dear love, don't be angry, there's a good man," said his goody; "to-morrow let us change our work. I'd go with the mowers and mow, and you shall mind the house."

Yes! the husband thought that would do very well.

"So, early next morning, his goody took a scythe over her shoulders, and went into the hay-field with the mowers and began to mow; but the man was to mind the house and the work at home.

First of all he wanted to churn butter, butter when he had churned a while he got thirsty, and went down to the cellar to tap a barrel of ale. So, just when when he had knocked in the bung, and was putting the tap into the cask, he heard the pig coming into the kitchen overhead. Then of he ran up the cellar stairs, with the tap in his hand, as fast as he could, to look after the pig, lest it should upset the churn. But when he got up and saw that the pig had already knocked the churn over, and stood there rooting and grunting among the cream, which was running all over the floor, he got so wild with rage that he forgot the barrel of ale, and ran at the pig as hard as he could. He caught it, too, just as it ran out of doors, and gave it such a kick that piggy lay for dead on the spot. Then, all at once, he remembered that he had the tap in his hand; and when he got down to the cellar, every drop of ale had run out of the cask.

Then he went into the dairy and found enough cream left to fill the churn again; so he began to churn, for butter they must have for dinner. When he had churned a bit, he remembered that their milking cow was still up in the byre, and hadn't had a bit to eat or a drop to drink all the morning, though the sun was high. Then all at once he thought it was too far to take her to the meadow, so he'd just get her up on the house-top—for the house, you must know, was thatched with the soda, and a fine crop of grass was growing there. Now, their house was close up against a steep down, and he thought he'd just as well not go to the byre, but he'd just as well go to the house-top. So he took the cow up on the house-top, and went out with his milk pail, and thought he'd better first see if the cow before he turned her out on the thatch; so he took up a bucket to draw water out of the well; but as he stooped down at the well's brink, all the cream ran out of the churn over his shoulders and so went down into the well.

Now, it was near dinner time, and he had not even got the butter yet; so he thought he had better boil the porridge and filled the pot with water and hung it over the fire. When he had done that, he thought the cow might, perhaps, fall off the thatch and break her legs or neck. So he got up on the house, to tie her up. One end of the rope he tied fast to the cow's neck, and the other he slipped down the chimney, and tied round his own thigh; and he began to make his way to the water now began to boil in the pot, and he had still to grind the oatmeal.

So he began to grind away, but while he was hard at it, down fell the cow off the house-top after all, and as she fell she dragged the man up to the chimney by the rope. There he struck fast, and as for the cow, she hung half-way down the wall, swinging between heaven and earth, for she could get neither down nor up.

And now the goody had waited seven nights and seven breadths for her husband to call them home to dinner; but never a call had they had. At last she thought she had waited long enough. But when she got there, and found the cow hanging in such an ugly place, she ran up and cut the rope in two with her scythe. But, as she did this, down came her husband on top of the chimney; and so when his old dame came inside the kitchen, there she found him standing on his head in the porridge pot.

Black Bart.

The following details relating to the early life of "Black Bart," the highwayman poet, are taken from a letter of an acquaintance to a relative in this city. It is said that they will prove of great interest and is to be hoped they are most of his early associates.

There were private houses that cost $100,000 to build and furnish. There were stamp mills and mining structures that cost $50,000 each. There were three daily newspapers and a hotel that cost $300,000. It was a teeming, busy, and money-making population, and among the people were a score or more men worth from $300,000 to $500,000. Mackey and Flood both lived there. There were three banks, a gas company, a water company, a splendid theater and a costly court house.

Eight years have passed and the town is a wreck. The $5,000 people have dwindled to 5,000. The banks have retired from business, the merchants have closed up and left; the hotel is abandoned; the gas company is bankrupt, and scores of costly residences have either been taken to pieces and moved away or given over to the rats. Real estate will not pay the taxes. Nothing can be sold that will cost us worth to move away. The rich men have all gone. Those who remain are the miners, their superintendents, and the saloon men and gamblers.

"After a few years he returned home again, staying with his father only a short time, then going to the State of Illinois, where he was married, and within a year or two he returned with his wife to work his father's farm; but farming not being to his taste, he again went West and soon returned and moved his family to Illinois, where he resided when the Rebellion broke out.

"Understand that he enlisted as a private soldier, but was soon promoted on account of gallant service, always being found at the front when there was any fighting to be done, and served faithfully until the end of the war, when he was honorably discharged. He was wounded several times, and if accounts are true about his disabilities he should be drawing a pension. With all his faults his old friends here feel very kindly towards him yet."

$66 a week at home, $5 out of town. Pay absolutely sure. No risk. Capital not required. Reader, if you want business at which persons of either sex, young or old, can make great pay all the time that they work, with absolute certainty, write for particulars to H. HALLETT & Co, Portland, Maine.

A Deserted City.

It is not often that an American town is doomed to destruction, but Virginia City, Nevada, affords an instance, at least.

There were private houses that cost $100,000 to build and furnish. There were stamp mills and mining structures that cost $50,000 each. There were three daily newspapers and a hotel that cost $300,000. Real estate will not pay the taxes. Nothing can be sold that will cost us worth to move away. The rich men have all gone. Those who remain are the miners, their superintendents, and the saloon men and gamblers.

The cause of this decadence, which has swallowed up millions of capital and wrecked the worldly ambition of thousands of persons, is the failure of the Comstock mines to turn out additional wealth.

How To Secure Health.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILLE'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health in the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectively curing Scrofula, Syphilis, Erysipelas, Malaria; all nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious complaints and all Diseases indicating an impure Condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, Skin, etc. It cures indigestion; a single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.
